It is the successor of the Skoda Felicia, which was discontinued in 2001.

The Fabia was available in hatchback, estate named Fabia Combi and saloon named Fabia Sedan body styles at launch, and since 2007, the second generation is offered in hatchback and estate versions. The third generation Fabia was launched in 2015. Contents The estate version Fabia Combi was introduced in September 2000 at the Paris Motor Show. It was the first model to use the Volkswagen Groups A04 platform, which it shared with the Volkswagen Polo Mk4 and SEAT Ibiza. The VRS also had its final gearbox ratio changed. Most importantly, the Sport model was added, with the 75 PS 55 kW 1.4 petrol being offered with a manual transmission. This engine was quickly dropped for the 1.2 HTP, which while not as powerful, was a much more free revving engine giving a more sporty feel and flexible drive. The 75 PS 55 kW version of the 1.4 16v was only mated to Volkswagens fourspeed automatic transmission with fuzzy logic operation until the addition of earlier Sport models which mated it with a manual transmission. The 1.4 8v was dropped in 2003. The Fabias overall performance and fuel consumption figures fall behind other city cars and small family cars as it is larger and heavier. However, the 1.2 HTP High Torque Performance engine was developed specifically for the Fabia and offers better performance and fuel economy, and was later used in Volkswagen's own Polo due to its high acclaim. It was also the highest displacement 3 cylinder petrol engine until 2014 and BMW's 1.5 litre 3 cylinder turbo engine. Later in the Fabia's life the midrange Comfort model was dropped for the name Ambiente to fit in with the rest of the range. Other models available throughout the car's lifespan included Ambiente SE, Blackline, Silverline, Sport, Bohemia estate only, runout model and VRS. Various safety features and minor changes were made over time. Easy and Junior models were sold in Eastern European markets where the buying power is lower.

Some of these Fabias do not have painted bumpers, side mirrors or gloveboxes. The Junior didn't have power steering and the steering wheel was borrowed from Octavia I. Because of that, it was slightly bigger, with a diameter of 380 mm instead of the regular 370 mm found on all the other Fabia models. Also sold in such markets is the Fabia Praktik, which is a panel van version of the Fabia with the rear windows and seats removed. A lesser powered version of the 1.4 MPI with just 60 PS 44 kW is also sold in Eastern Europe. The downfall of this weaker engine was that it struggled to shift the weighty car. The engine is Volkswagen Group's 1.9 litre PumpeDuse Turbocharged Direct Injection diesel engine, producing 130 PS 96 kW and 310 Nm 229 lbft at 1900 rpm, with a sixspeed manual gearbox. It also falls in a low tax band Band C in the UK, further increasing its cost benefits over its chiefly petrolpowered counterparts although this is disputed, as most VRSs are tax band F, costing 145 a year as of 2017. This model was known as the Fabia VRS SE. There is also a 2009 version, which is believed to be a late registration. The engine portfolio is the same as the hatchback version, without the 1.2 44 kW one. In comparison to the 1st generation Fabia, both basic 1.2 litre 3 cylinders gained 4 kW each new power peak was 44 kW 60 PS, and 51 kW 70 PS. There was only a single 1.4 litre 16v petrol on this model, producing 63 kW 86 PS. The range topping petrol engine was the 1.6 litre 4 cylinder with variable valve timing producing 77 kW 105 hp. There was also an option to mate this engine with a 6speed tiptronic transmission sourced from Aisin. The top of the range diesel was a 1.9 litre PumpeDuse 4 cylinder producing 77 kW 105 PS. In the UK the trim levels were called 1, 2, Sport, 3, and GreenLine later S, SE, Elegance, and GreenLine. In India, the trim levels were Active, Classic, Ambiente and Elegance. All models sold within the EU were equipped with ABS, front passenger, driver and side airbags.

Curtain airbags and ESC were available as an option. At the Frankfurt International Motor Show IAA 2007 Skoda presented near production state design study of the Fabia Scout a rugged version of the Fabia Combi. However, it was until May 2009 when this car finally started to roll off the production line in Mlada Boleslav. The new generation Fabia featured a specific design element a roof in different colour than the rest of the body was available as an option. The updated version can be easily distinguished from prior versions by the different shape of the front bumper and front fog lights. The facelift to the second generation Fabia also brought Xenon headlights as standard on higher end models. Inside, new steering wheels were a noticeable difference. Though their shape remained the same, headlights with a projector module underwent technical changes for full beam, a separate reflector is fitted on the inner side of the lamp, while the projector module providing a dimmed beam is on the outer side. This model features the same 1.4litre twincharged petrol engine as the Volkswagen Polo Mk5 GTI, producing 132 kW 180 PS and is mated with a 7speed DSG dualclutch transmission as standard. The number included 1,788,063 1st generation cars, and another 1,211,937 2nd generation Fabias. It was launched in China for the 2009 model year. The car was well praised by Indian motor magazines, but it couldn't live up to the hype created by the previous generation Octavia. Fabia has not succeeded in this market due to dealer problems, steep prices and Skoda trying to position itself as a luxury marque. Skoda India has decided to bring in more powerful engines at better prices and taken strict measures to improve dealer quality levels and curb excessive service costs. There was only a single 1.4 litre 16v petrol on this model, producing 85 PS 63 kW. The range topping petrol engine was the 1.6 16v engine producing 105 PS 77 kW.

There was also an option to link this engine to a six speed tiptronic transmission sourced from Aisin. The range topping diesel was a 1.9 TDI producing 105 PS 77 kW. It is related with the 2010 Volkswagen Vento, also developed in India, which is essentially a threebox version of the Volkswagen Polo Mk5. It is produced by Skoda India exclusively for the Indian market. It also has a slightly different interior. Since its debut in 2009, the Fabia Super 2000 won 14 international titles and 22 national championships. Lars Larsson won the FIA European Rallycross Championship in 2007. Sergey Zagumennov did the same in 2014. Despite being 8 mm shorter, the Mk3 Fabia still offers more passenger room due to its extended wheelbase. Simultaneously, its weight has been reduced by 65 kg 143 lb. It gathers data from a radar sensor to automatically warn the driver and apply the brakes at the possibility of a collision at certain speeds. The rear of the car was also given a slight update with new bumper mounted reflectors, and the option for Full LED rear lights, which are now included as standard on the range topping Monte Carlo trim level. It was designed by Skoda Auto University students as a throwback to the Felicia Fun, a compact pickup car produced during the 1990s. It was shown at the annual 2015 Worthersee GTI fan meeting. The pickup bed required the removal of the C pillars, necessitating wider B pillars and stiffened side panels to retain structural strength. The Funstar is powered by a 1.2 litre TSI petrol engine, paired with a 7speed dualclutch transmission. Retrieved 2 March 2007. By using this site, you agree to the Terms of Use and Privacy Policy.
